

A New Generation of AmeriCorps Evidence Building

About the FY25 Webinar Series

America’s future is being made in AmeriCorps and our new generation of evidence-building will capture the ever-evolving nature of our work and our impact. The pride and excitement of the 30th Anniversary Celebration of AmeriCorps over the past 12 months drove home the fact that serving with AmeriCorps or with AmeriCorps Seniors can spark a lifetime of volunteering, civic engagement, and giving back, that ignites a service movement across our nation.

The celebration also fortified the importance of measuring the impact of AmeriCorps investments, service opportunities and collective networks. AmeriCorps is now focused on the next chapter of our evidence story. We will explore ways to deepen our equitable research and evaluation practices and strengthen the use of our participatory approaches. We will continue to engage community members as critical evidence building stakeholders in the learning and impact ecosystem.

The six-webinar series hosted by the AmeriCorps Office of Research and Evaluation will focus on evidence and impact with our participants, partners in the field, within the agency, and leaders in communities and the nation. Register and participate in our year that explores how a new generation of evidence-building will be used to strengthen community-based organization practices, members and volunteers, local impact, and public trust.

Learning Objectives this Webinar Season will:

- 1. Share how AmeriCorps is building evidence together with partners, communities, and leaders for a more powerful value proposition for the future.
- 2. Encourage nonprofits and practitioners to use evidence-built by AmeriCorps to empower their own future evidence and data exploration.
- 3. Provide original research and commissioned work on National Service and civic engagement that informs the future of our nation’s service movement.
